TRENDS, University of Insubria Launch Internship Program for Master's Students

To strengthen international academic and research cooperation and the strategic partnership between TRENDS Research & Advisory and the University of Insubria, TRENDS International Training Institute organized an intensive training program for outstanding master's students.

A gathering was organized at the Center's headquarters in Abu Dhabi to introduce students to TRENDS' diverse research activities and integrate them into a stimulating research environment for two weeks. Students from the MA programs in Modern Languages for International Communication and Cooperation and International and Comparative Law benefited.

Senior Researcher Sultan Al-Rubaei, Head of TRENDS International Training Institute, said that this training program is part of the strategic partnership between the two parties and reflects TRENDS's commitment to enhancing knowledge and strengthening international cooperation in research and science.

Al-Rubaei noted that the program included a set of interactive and practical activities. Trainees participated in brainstorming sessions on formulating research titles and designing opinion polls. They will also review the TRENDS Center's research writing guide and begin writing their own scientific research under the supervision of specialized researchers.

The Head of TRENDS International Training Institute explained that one of the program's most prominent activities was the trainees' participation in the Fifth TRENDS Annual Conference, Sustainable Water Security, which was held at the Ritz-Carlton Abu Dhabi in September 2025. This allowed them to take notes and contribute to preparing the conference's white paper, enhancing their analytical and documentation skills.
